Tasting Note

While the practice of maturing whiskey in sherry casks isn't as long-standing as peated whiskies, it has become a standard of old world sensibilities. Westland celebrates this custom by filling hogsheads and butts sourced from the same region the Scottish find their casks. But what they do with them differs. Their five-malt spirit plays a significant role, allowing balance between the sherry influence and the local malted barley flavor. They have their sherry casks shipped whole, which is unusual in the bus
